
Long range weather forecast.

Posted by kenmorton - 2007/08/25 07:45

This morning I heard on the radio that the Met office are forecasting that September and October are likely to be warmer, drier and less windy than usual.

Just hope the less windy part turns out to be wrong.

=====

Re:Long range weather forecast.

Posted by Shawn - 2007/08/27 16:25

Ahh - revenge is sweet!! Shame there's no sh1t stirring icon available indeed!:evil: Hehe

To make up for missing the killer kirby session:huh: , and Kens dodgy forecast & stirring, I've managed to convince my Mrs that its a very good idea:) for me & Alex (frustrated student) to go & rip it up in Mauritius:cheer: for 2 weeks!!
Wooooooo Hooooooooooooooooo!!:laugh: :laugh: :laugh: :laugh: :laugh:

So - from 14th Sept - we'll be thinking of you all dodging the mersy trout while we sweat it out in windsurfing mecca!

Anyone got any tips or hints we should know about before setting off?

=====

Re:Long range weather forecast.

Posted by stu - 2007/08/29 14:50

Heres a tip...

You and Alex are b@5ts! Lucky buggers!

I'm going to Paros for a week of darksiding it on the 22nd...

=====

Re:Long range weather forecast.

Posted by Alex - 2007/08/29 15:35

You're just worried Stu. You know i'll come back and be nailing those flakas as easily as the carve diablo's and my favourite trick, the upwind 180. :P

=====