
West Kirby ... I'm coming back

Posted by FatYorkshireGit - 2009/09/10 21:41

Hi everyone....

Its been 12 years since I rode the wall, 12 years since I actually went speed sailing, and as of next week I'll be ready to head back.

In my life Ive done many things, from riding motorcycles to pro import drag racing (its an american thing) but nothing no matter how fast has come close to that feeling of wind powered speed. After 4 years without even stepping on a board I decided to take the plunge and get back into the sport and I have to admit after walking down the wall for the first time with people actually on the water last sunday I cant wait to get back on it.

So I look forward to seeing some old faces and getting to know some new....

Its official that Fat Yorkshire Git who loved to go fast is coming back to the Kirb.... See you next time its windy.....

PS anyone got a used speed board? they want to flog....

LOL I was just watching it LOL... some really old faces I havent seen for years, Sam Harrison, Pete Tye LOL... I did speak to Jilly Benbow though a couple of months back when she was selling a pascal maka board on ebay....

I saw whitey and stacey at weymouth in 2007, thats when I started thinking about all this.... Hooked now tho lol... just sorted some gear, getting whiteys gaastra vapors from last season along with a couple of exocets, though they may change when ive looked over the other boards, but want something thats just bloody quick for the gps stuff. No anyone with any of these gps tracker thingies for cheap...

Going out to lanzo next week for the first time in 20 years get wet for the first time since I left South Padre in texas (now thats a speed venue if there was one) cant wait to get on the wall LOL... I feel like a bloody teenager just taking up the sport again... Remember those days at brid mate LOL...

Yeah I could be very interested in the Thommen, which version is it the plastic one or the full on carbon?

Me kite..... I was doing that 9 years ago..... just wasn't any good.... same problem can't turn round without falling off or go upwind lol

Seriously tho, I just need to freshen up my kite riding and continue that learning curve.... got a 17 Slingshot and board ready to go... my only problem is I was only any good at it on totally flat water, my fav spot south padre in Texas.....

Got some good tides at Kirby this weekend and in 2 weeks when I'm back from Lanzarote..... we should go you can teach me

As for speed, chatted with Gump today.... It's on like Flint Man... It's gonna be like old times (no wind lol).... We need to get Stacey Vass on board lol

Better still we need to setup some GPS events at locations, turn up make as many runs as possible in an allotted time load all the data on the computer and name the winner....

I'm sure if we can get enough interest we could bring back the popularity and competition of the 90's without all the cost....

Anyone else got any ideas?

Hey Darren. wow keen as mate. I see you have found the GPS Speedsurfing site. (GP3S)

I used to speed sail at WK 87-89 early days of WKSSA with Jill B, Rob Clemson and the rest of the crew. I shelved the speed 89 due to windless BSA events etc etc.

Got back into speed at WK in 2007, with the GPS scene bringing a fresh new approach to the whole speed comps.

On the GP3S forum, I look after the weather forecasting (well kind of) more the messenger.

Basically we run and call speed events for the 3 main UK spots, The Ray at Southend, Portland, Weymouth and West Kirby. Speedsailing outside these main places is catered for by the local crew, all around the country and Eire

Simon Hinkley oversees the ultimate Speed Meetings (USM) I look after WK, Dave White The Ray and Pete Young Portland.

If a forecast shows promise for 25kts from the right direction a USM is called, usually 3 days in advance.

The main UK comp is the British GPS Speed Ladder, sponsored by several UK windsurfing shops. You can subscribe to the event via the GP3S site under "my gps" and "events"

Speed sailing in the UK is well and truly alive and kicking! and better than ever!:cheer:
cheers

phew - just come back from holiday all relaxed to find this frightening thread on the forums.
I'm OK with the speedsailing just want to confirm that whilst in the US you became teetotal?

could soon add speed to the sailors logs and/or run a west kirby speed table if anyones interested?

Re:West Kirby ... I'm coming back

Posted by FatYorkshireGit - 2009/09/22 22:11

If you mean windsurfing then yes absolutely did got into bikes and cars in the states so for the last 4 years its been 4 bikes and a 400HP scooby I built

If you mean t-total on the lines of drinking yes that's pretty much true also lol

Over the last year I've had 2 major ops and bikes and cars just don't work any more
So windsurfing it is again

Just in lanzarote right now lol sailed for the first time in 4 years properly today loved it
And you know I'm a speed freak lol

I think we should defo get a speed board up and even run some old days style speed events

Being underweight can result from eating disorders, chronic diseases, and it is also a concern for athletes and naturally thin people who wish to be bigger, stronger, and more muscular.

What To Eat To Gain Weight

Increasing your intake of junk foods and greasy foods is not a good way to gain weight. Junk foods usually contain unhealthy trans fats or saturated fats. Even though you need to increase your calorie consumption to gain weight, those calories should come from foods that are good for you.

Protein powders and nutritional supplement drinks such as Ensure (buy direct) can be added as in-between meal snacks if you still need more calories. Some protein powders are flavored and only need added water and some others can be blended with your choice of juice or milk to improve the taste.

Another way to gain weight is to move in with our lasses mother for 2 months lol I was 15stone when i moved back home 2 month later i was 18 lol or as mike says..... COW PIES lol

Always remember Muscle Mass is heavier than Fat, but good fat weight is easier to gain and requires less exercise to build lol

Lots and Lots of carbs.....
