
Hollingworth Big Easterly in the Sunshine

Posted by Hollingworth - 2010/01/27 12:11

Hi Everyone,

We at Hollingworth Lake are setting up an Email alert system/ Twitter for when we expect our strong Easterly winds.

Many of you may have heard about Hollingworth Lake; you may not know that we get a freak easterly wind or "Beastery" here during the summer.

When there is High pressure over the South England this strong force 6+ kicks in at around 11 o'clock, the wind is accelerates down the hill above the lake like a katabatic wind.

So our proposal is that we monitor the weather and hopefully give a couple of days notice and an alert on a day that this is likely to happen.

Anyone interested in signing up drop me message me here or have a look at our Facebook page Hollingworth Lake Activity Centre or email holwac@link4life.org.

Mike <http://www.iwindsurf.co.uk/images/fbfiles/images/ws9.JPG>

=====

Re:Hollingworth Big Easterly in the Sunshine

Posted by animal - 2010/01/27 22:37

yeah yeah whatever:laugh:

=====

Re:Hollingworth Big Easterly in the Sunshine

Posted by Gumpy - 2010/01/29 23:31

Great idea mike we had some great easterly winds last summer and :P some mega sessions on the water at Hollingworth lake. Not many people realize the potential of easterly winds at the lake and I for one totally love it. Last year we had one week where I sailed 5 days on 5.2 and below

Cheers

Gumpy

=====