Hi Guys,

I had the items per page set at 10 - I've increased that to 30 now so if you still need two pages you've got too much gear ???? - seriously if you want I can increase it again if necessary but that also changes the number of logs displayed so might increase page load time etc...

Timeouts - difficult subject that seems to change on different computers. It seems to be an issue with the time on the server being different from the time on people's computers - some browsers don't like it to be too different as then they decide that the cookie is invalid when it should be valid. I'll do a bit more research into that again when I get some time. Meanwhile if you seem to lose lots of info try hitting the 'back' button - you should go back to the page and all your typing ? you may need to copy and paste that into a new reply - otherwise I'm sorry !!

my gripe was more that i couldn't see the "next page" links but that seems fine now

i did hit the back button but then had to do some work (crazy i know) so lost the contents of the clipboard... just a bit

---

anoying thats all

can you not look into some different kind of session variables e.g. look at the exchange 2000 > web front end... there doesn't seem to be any time out for that!

I'm glad you said that cos I was sure it wasn't there the first time, at least now I know I'm not losing it !
