
Login

Posted by Slim - 2002/11/15 12:46

Sometimes, I have to log in more than once, as I will have already done it and been browsing on the site, the next thing I know is that I am being told that I am an anonymous user. Confused? It is no biggie tho, I obviously have too much time on my hands. Otherwise good site, keep up the hard work.....In your bosses time I hope!!

=====

Login

Posted by Bert - 2002/11/18 17:57

Hi Sim,

That's happened to me once or twice as well - not sure what causes it but I'll have a look.

The site uses cookies to keep a track of who you are and whether you're logged in between pages. Each time you view a page the time is recorded in the cookie from this site on your machine so the site knows how long since you last called a page - I can change the security setting so that all users would have to log on each day or each X days but I've turned that off so that you shouldn't have to log in again once you have the first time. Good in some respects but it means some people forget their password because they're not using it very often.

If it happens again to you, see if you can make a note of what page you were on and what page you were going to - that way I can try and narrow down which bit of the script might be messing up the cookies....

Thanks for letting me know, Bert.

=====